Crazy celebrates in Sweden with the Soca Rebels

LAST month calypsonian Crazy (Edwin Ayong) performed in Gothenburg, Sweden to celebrate the 20th anniversary of Swedish band Soca Rebels.

Together with Rapso Rebel – Everard Romany, – Crazy gave the party a whole lot of extra energy, feelings of T&T's strong tradition, and delightful tastes of the fêtes on the Caribbean islands.

He performed several of his hits and patrons who were familiar with his music weren't surprised at the reaction from the audience when he sang "Nani Wine".

Before the concert, Crazy told local radio stations and newspapers that Sweden is his first home country. Whether he was just flirting with the local audience or if he told the truth is not easy to be answered.

Soca Rebels are the only soca band in Sweden and did their first collaboration with Crazy in 1992 when they backed him for his tour of the country. The bands founder, panman and front artiste, Lars Hansson was pleased about this year's reunion with his Trinidadian friend.

One of the pioneers of the rapso movement in Trinidad & Tobago back in the 1970's Brother Shortman, (Everald Romany) – who now resides in Sweden also performed on the night.
